

A survey of more than 1,000 consumers conducted on March 29, 2020 to determine how COVID-19 has impacted their lives shows considerable consumer affinity for remote/digital insurance solutions. This represents an opportunity and a challenge for insurance providers to meet consumer demands at a time of such fundamental societal change.

People are Concerned

82% are concerned about leaving their home

56% are concerned about their financial obligations

How would you prefer to fill out and send documents to your insurance providers?

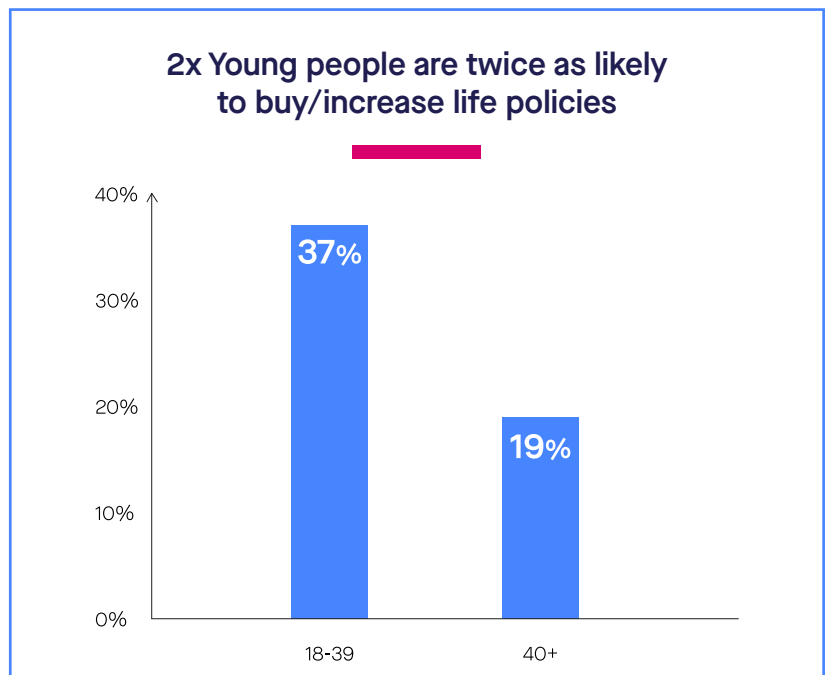

People are Taking Action

64.5% are cutting personal expenses

56% likely to shop around for insurance now

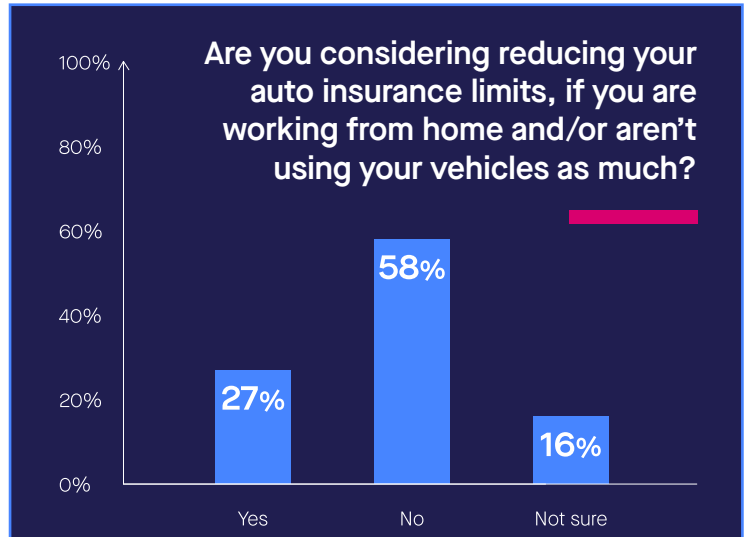

48% are considering buying or increasing life insurance coverage due to coronavirus

2x Young people are twice as likely to buy/increase life policies

24% have reached out to their insurance carrier to discuss financial obligations or to ask coverage questions as a result of the coronavirus

Customers Want to Buy & Have Insurance Digitally & Remotely

8x consumers prefer to buy insurance online insurance vs. traditional agents

90% prefer digital/remote interactions with their insurance provider vs face-to-face

